1) Read the following passage and answer the question given below.

English isn't a language; it's a class, right? That is exactly what Irrfan Khan's Hindi Medium portrays. The movie showcases how we have created a great divide between those who can't speak English and those who can, and how we have stereotyped those who can't speak the language as uneducated.

The film's message is a hard-hitting one. It has touched base upon one of the most important obsessions in our country, which is to speak impeccable English. In a country where the language spoken at home may be Hindi or such, but it is speaking English that gives you class and a sense of inclusiveness, a standard, and a license to socialise in the society with confidence. Our obsession is such that speaking in your national language slots you under the 'lower class strata.' Can't one be classy if one doesn't speak English? What if your financial backing prohibits you from learning English? Who is the one to be blamed then for not being classy?

The film probes all such questions and more. It is a story about a couple's struggle to get their daughter admitted to a posh English school in order to survive in this society and also prevent others from befooling her. As usual, Irrfan has bowled us over with his stellar choice as much as he regularly does with his stellar performance.
